Committee Will Promote Festival Window Displays

Two Contests Planned For Local Merchants During Tulip Time

Mrs. Jay H. Den Herder, Jack Plewes and James Borr were selected today as a committee to promote a merchants' window display contest in Holland during Tulip Time, sponsored by the Retail Merchants' association.

This contest, hailed by the Tulip Time committee and the Chamber of Commerce as a particularly desirable addition to the festival, is expected to bring added charm to the business district during festivities.

Mrs. Emily Stoner of Pittsburgh, Pa. and Mrs. J. J. Nicholson of Atlanta, Ga., who will come to Holland to judge entries in the Tulip Time flower show in the Armory, will judge the window displays.

Contest rules of a high standard are being compiled. No artificial flowers will be allowed. Shrubs and other flowers may be used in arrangements.

Two trophies are offered. The Williams Jewelry silver trophy donated in 1932, will be grand prize for the best window display, and the Post Jewelry bronze trophy will be the grand prize for the best flower arrangement.

The window contest for downtown merchants was revitalized last year after an interval of many years.

At that time Allen Tot and Gift shop won the silver cup for its garden scene with fountain and figures in Dutch costume. Rose Cloak store won the bronze trophy for its Victorian arrangement of tulips in a silver tureen.

Given honorable mention were Fris Book Store, Dutch Mill restaurant, Mar-Do, Sears-Roebuck, Du Mez, Montgomery Ward, De Vries and Dornbos, Ebelink's, and Knoll's Gift shop.

Mayor Ben Steffens' successor may either be appointed or elected, City Attorney Peter S. Boter said.

In rendering an opinion, Boter said the city charter provides that it is in the discretion of Common Council to appoint a mayor or call a special election within 30 days.

The person so appointed or elected will serve the unexpired term, which in this case will be nearly two years. The only offices in which appointments are effective only until the next regular election are those of aldermen and municipal judge, Boter said.

Boter said Ald. Bernard De Pree, who has been serving as mayor pro tempore for two years under Steffens, will serve in this capacity until a successor is selected. According to charter, this pro tempore position is listed officially as "president pro tempore" of Common Council. In this capacity, De Pree will preside at meetings of council until a mayor takes over.

Steffens' death occurred less than a week before the annual charter meeting of Common Council at which time a mayor pro tem and other appointive officers and board members are named.

Although Common Council may call a meeting at any time to decide whether to appoint a mayor or call a special election, it was generally believed the necessary action would be taken at Monday's charter meeting. (See details this page.)

Mayor Steffens' death marks the second mayor's death in Ottawa county in a month. Mayor Edmond Wilds of Grand Haven died March 26.

Steffens' election as mayor in 1946 came at a time when Holland was preparing to celebrate its Centennial. As a member of the Centennial Commission, Steffens devoted long hours to making the year-long program in 1947 an outstanding success.

Unopposed in 1946, Steffens defeated Willis A. Diekmann by a narrow margin in the city primaries last February.

The mayor entered public life more than 20 years ago when he was named alderman. He filled many important appointments, serving as chairman of the powerful Ways and Means committee for eight years under former Mayor Henry Geerlings.

As mayor, Steffens was one of five local men representing Holland city on the Ottawa county Board of Supervisors. He also was a director of the Chamber of Commerce and First National bank as well as serving as member ex-officio on city boards.

The city hall in Holland and the court house in Grand Haven will be closed Friday afternoon. Downtown stores here will close from 2 to 3:30 p.m.

Zeeland Included In Great Lakes Linguistic Survey

Word Pronunciations Highlight Research to Be Published in Book

An interesting survey was conducted in Zeeland last week, one of 25 communities in Michigan to be contacted in a linguistic survey of the Great Lakes basin, under auspices of the University of Michigan, Raven McDavid, Jr., who is doing the field work in the state of Michigan, visited a family in Zeeland to determine if the people in this vicinity use the phrase cherry stone, cherry pit or cherry seed, or if a current of water is called a stream, creek or brook.

Upon completion of the survey the results will be published in book form as an extension of linguistic atlas of the New England states, "South Atlantic and Mid Atlantic states, being published under the direction of Prof. Hans Kurath.

The Great Lakes survey will show the way word pronunciations have been brought west from the various Eastern states. The survey in Michigan is being directed by Prof. Albert Marckwardt of the English department at the University of Michigan. The work was begun in 1938 under the auspices of the Rackham fund at the University.

McDavid said the most important thing he's noticed in this vicinity was that the New England influence on the vocabulary seems to be less than in the eastern part of the state. He said a number of Dutch words and phrases have crept into the English language in this section. He added that many persons mix a certain amount of Dutch pronunciations with the English. He said it would be interesting to conduct an survey on Yankee Dutch idioms alone, in the vicinity.

Certain persons are questioned in the surveys, usually an unsophisticated person and a younger person with more sophistication. About 500 questions are asked, McDavid said.

Following the Zeeland survey, McDavid planned to go to Newaygo and Cadillac.

Mrs. Deckard Ritter Dies in Pennsylvania

Friends in Holland have received word of the recent death of Mrs. Deckard Ritter at her home in Indiana, Pa. Although she had been in poor health for several years, she had visited her daughter, Mrs. Philip Ruopp, in Chicago, only a week before a fatal heart attack. Her husband, Prof. Ritter, and son, Robert, accompanied the body to New Orleans where burial took place near her childhood home.

TWO DECADES OF
PUBLIC SERVICE

The death of Mayor Ben Steffens marks the end of two decades of decades of public service, which was indeed a real contribution to the city, business and religious life of the community.

He came to this country with his parents when he was a child and from these immigrant beginnings
built up a successful grocery business in the American tradition.

Twenty-odd years ago he entered public office as an alderman and in the ensuing years served on many committees. For 10 years he headed the powerful Ways and Means committee. He served on the board of supervisors, the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce, and as a director of the First National bank, as well as ex-officio member of all city boards. Regular performance of all these duties was a sacred charge
with Mayor Steffens.

The Mayor was proud of his record of public service and drew keen enjoyment from being burgomaster of Holland. A shy man in many ways, he was ever willing to set aside his private life when duty called and he had devoted his entire time to city affairs
after his retirement from business
a few years ago. Not a seasoned campaigner, he nevertheless was sensitive to public opinion and honestly tried to be a good public servant. How well he succeeded can be recorded in that he never lost a race for public office.

His election as mayor came at a time when the city was preparing to celebrate its Centennial, and demands of the observance took its toll of his leisure time and his energies. Both were cheerfully given.

Besides his public service, he was a successful business man who gained success in the true democratic pattern. He was a self-made man of humble origin.

Honesty, cheerfulness and willingness to share his time with family, church and city were virtues that will long live in the hearts of Holland people.

Mayor Steffens will be missed.

Nehemiah Rebuilds Jerusalem
Nehemiah 1-7

By Henry Geerlings

Rebuilding anything is harder
than building for the first time.
There was the rubbish to be removed before the foundations of the wall could be laid; and how much of it there was, and how difficult it had become from the tramp of many feet; The men were almost exhausted before it got taken away. The same is true of a congregation. How often we have seen a mission start out well, growing, gathering members and enthusiasm, and being known for its unity and activity. Suddenly something happened. Friction arose. Disinterest entered. People began falling away. Attendance dwindled. Those who remained lost heart. After a time an effort is made to revive the work. Only then is it discovered that rebuilding is the harder proposition.
Nehemiah was a man of affairs.
He was a practical man. He was a leader in the everyday interests of his fellows. He was a man on whose heart rested heavily the responsibility of caring for the temporal needs of his own city.

He had heard of the physically dilapidated condition of his home city. He must have brooded over it much and long until thinking began to betray itself in his countenance. The king noticed it. He remarked upon it. Nehemiah confessed he was worried. He made a clean breast of it to the king.
The king was sympathetic and friendly. He gave him a leave of absence to go back to Jerusalem to rebuild the wall and he helped to equip him for his journey and his task at the end of his journey.
When he came to his home city he found a very sorry sight. His heart must have ached more at what he saw there than over what he heard in the king's palace. Seeing is revealing and persuading and convincing. His secret night survey of conditions left nothing for him to do but to attempt to rebuild the once proud wall of his once proud city.

He found that his task was not going to be an easy one. There were bitter and powerful enemies
with whom he had to reckon concerning the carrying out of his plan. They were such men who were always ready to defeat any good purpose. Their opposition to this particular project seemed to be based upon a fear of a political rehabilitation of Jerusalem
and of course they were not at all in sympathy with the religious ideals and program for which this city stood. They must have looked upon Nehemiah as a kind of an interloper, an intruder into an area where he had no business.
These enemies preferred a Jerusalem lying in waste and the people who loved her living in poverty to a restored Jerusalem and a reanimated people. But Nehemiah was no coward. In face of all the opposition that was offered to his building program he never got mental panic. He never felt the urge to run away. He on the other hand brought all of his courage and all the resources of his genius to bear on the task and finally he outwitted his enemies.

But great credit must be given to the people who worked with him. They showed an extraordinary courage and a remarkable determination to do the task to which Nehemiah set them. It is significantly said of them that they had mind to work. This mind was due in some measure to the dominating and inspiring influence of the irresistible personality of their leader. His courage and his mind to work became contagious. The people caught the soul of Nehemiah and so they were infected with a burning spirit to rebuild. You cannot conquer or defeat people whose hearts are in the thing they are doing. Get men friendly and determined and devoted to a cause and one does not need to be a prophet in order to see what is going to happen to the cause.

The people who have a mind to work are the people who are doing things.

Courage is contagious. Think of men like Napoleon, Washington, Sheridan, Lincoln. Think of a few men who in the line of invention believed a thing could be done
when others said it was impossible. With courage, persistence and a great faith they stayed at it until it was accomplished. We must not detract from Nehemiah's capable and intelligent leadership.
At the same time his was his great courage, his unwillingness to be intimidated, his firm resolve never to give up, that carried his cause through to success. He did not know what it was to be afraid. How the men whose hearts many times were cold with fear must have been ashamed of themselves when they looked at him and saw him standing against the enemy like a stone wall. Courage will hide a multitude of weaknesses. Without it no combination of good qualities will carry us through.

For those picture-takers who like cloud effects, the shop has a supply of filters. The film supply is adequate too, although there is a little shortage of uncolored films, according to Schaafsma. Buick's New Dynaflo Drive

Considered one of the outstanding automotive engineering developments since the war, Buick's new Dynaflo transmission, introduced for 1948 on Roadmaster and cars, multiplies engine torque and transmits power to the rear wheels through an oil pump, turbine and stator combination instead of through conventional gears. This combination is called a torque converter.

The clutch pedal and conventional clutch are eliminated as are all sliding gears. Instead, the power plant, through the torque converter, does what gears used to do, transmitting a smooth flow of oil cushioned power as needed from a standing start to cruising speeds.

Planetary gears, operated by the converter, are provided for reverse and extreme low conditions and extreme grades, or for "rocking" the car. Only accelerator and brake pedal are needed in the driver's compartment. A selector lever mounted under the steering wheel chooses the driving range and provides for parking and neutral positions.

Arie Ter Haar, whose showroom and service garage is located at 150 East Eighth St., is local Buick and Pontiac dealer.

Mr. Seymour K. Padnos, Mgr.
Louis Padnos Iron & Metal Company
Holland, Michigan

Dear Mr. Padnos:

Under separate cover you will find fifteen copies of the brochure titled, "The Waste Paper Industry, Its Problems and Prospects for the Future."

We feel that you will be pleased with pictures of your model operation which appear within.

A thorough study of the waste paper plants of over 450 Midwest Waste Paper Dealers, convinced us that your plant was one of the most complete waste paper processing businesses that we have run across. So it was decided to feature your plant in the brochure, which is now being presented to Midwest dealers, mills, newspapers and industry trade papers all over the United States. The cleanliness of your plant, the exceptional care you take in processing your paper, and the high standing you enjoy with the consuming mills, all were taken into consideration.

The Public Relations Committee of the Midwest Consumers of Waste Paper, Mr. Block and I offer you our sincerest thanks for your cooperation. We know that a thorough study of your operations by other waste paper dealers will enable those dealers to improve their plant and pack to the consequent benefit of the entire Waste Consuming Industry, which last year consumed over 7,000,000 tons of needed waste paper.

We would like your reactions to the brochure, and permit us to add our congratulations to those of your fellow citizens in your fine community, Holland, Michigan.

Sincerely,

Paul W. Mowley

Resorter Drowns When Canoe Tips Near Saugatuck

Theodore Keane, 18, Chicago, was drowned Sunday, when the canoe in which he was riding capsized in the Kalamazoo river, 100 feet from the north end of Butler St., Saugatuck. The family name Keane, was recently changed from Kokenis.

Two companions, Arthur Alexander, 49, and Thomas Mukosey, 18, both of Chicago, who were in the canoe, were rescued by Arthur Alexander, Jr., who was standing on shore near the spot the canoe overturned, Coast Guard officials said.

Coast guardsmen, sheriff's officers and Saugatuck firemen worked on the body for 55 minutes before Dr. K. C. Miller, of Saugatuck, pronounced him dead. All three persons in the canoe had come to the Alexander cottage for the week-end, according to Coast Guard officials.

William Wilson, Harry Newman and Harold C. Whipple, all of Saugatuck, aided Coast Guard crews dragging for the body. The Coast Guard received the call at 8 p.m. and were on the scene by 8:18. They dragged the area for 25 minutes before finding the body.

Several Saugatuck fishermen also aided rescue operations.

The body was brought to the Ver Lee funeral home in Holland, and was taken to Chicago, Monday.

Hope Baseballers Trim Hillsdale in MIAA Contest

Locals Garner 14 Hits
in Free-Hitting Tilt;
Ver Hey Is Winner

Hope college's baseball squad unveiled its first MIAA win at River View Park Thursday afternoon when it outsluged Hillsdale 13-9. The victory was Hope's second in three starts.

The contest was anything but a pitcher's duel with Hope smacking out 14 safeties and Hillsdale ramming 11 hits. Lefty Bill Ver Hey was in trouble on several occasions, but managed to finish the game without relief. Hillsdale used three pitchers in an effort to stem the tide.

Hope had to overcome a four run deficit before they were able to pull away to a safe margin. Hillsdale scored a single tally in the second to open the scoring before netting three more in the fourth on two hits and two costly errors.

Coach Jack Schouten's lads came roaring back with five of their own in the last of the fourth. Three singles, two walks and a hit batsman accounted for the tally. Hope added three more in the fifth inning on four singles and a couple of infield outs to move out in front 8-4.

Catcher Rowe of the Dales whittled the Hope margin by a run in the sixth when he smashed a Ver Hey fast ball into the left field stands for a home run, making the count 8-5.

The locals virtually "iced" the ball game in the sixth when five more Hope runners dented home plate. Three timely singles, combined with a pair of walks and a couple of costly errors did the damage for the Dales. This flurry ended the Hope scoring for the afternoon.

Hillsdale, however, was still showing spark when it came to bat in the seventh. Pitcher Goelling singled to open the inning. His hit was followed by another single by Honbeck, before Bill Young, shortstop and star foot-baller, bounced a long drive out of the left field stands for a homer, scoring three runs. They added another on two hits and a walk. Neither squad did any further damage in the remaining innings.

Lou Vollmer, lanky first sacker, was the Hope hitting star of the day, getting four singles in five trips to the plate. Rowe paced the Hillsdale offense with a homer, a double and two singles. Seven Hope batters went down by the strikeout route while Ver Hey managed to fan six Dale batters.

Tiny pearl buttons fastened the gown in back. Her tulle veil was held in place with clusters of lilies of the valley. She carried long-stemmed roses.

Holland Nine Edged by Zeeland In Friday Tilt

Local Rally Faltered In Seventh Inning; Second Dutch Defeat

Falling two runs short of tying the score with a rally in the last inning, the Holland High nine bowed to Zeeland on the 21st St. diamond Friday afternoon 6-4. It was Holland's second loss in three starts. In the first meeting between the two squads, Holland was victorious by a 3-2 margin.

For five innings the contest was a pitcher's duel between Clyde Kehrwecker of Holland and Gebben of Zeeland. The only scoring was a lone tally taken by the locals when Centerfielder Vander Kolk of the Chicks let Bud Witteveen's long drive get passed him. Witteveen was able to score on the fourth base error.

A timely double by First Baseman Raab with men on second and third gave Zeeland a one run lead in the sixth inning. A walk, a single, and an infield out had put the runners in scoring position.

Then in the seventh inning Zeeland bunched five hits and an error for four runs to take a commanding lead. The big blow of the uprisal was a long double by Third Baseman Sheridan with two runners on.

After two pinch batters had filed out to deep left field to open the final inning for the Dutchmen, the locals staged their belated rally. Northuis walked, pinch hitter Earl Lubbers doubled, and both scored on "Spike" Van Eck's single to right. Van Eck went to second on the rightfielder's error and then came in to score when Piersma singled to center. The rally died, however when Ron Appledorn went out shortstop to first.

Holland garnered five hits from the slants of Gebben and Relief Hurler, Carlson while Zeeland managed to get 10 safeties off Kehrwecker.

Inspector Orders Health Exams

Local food handlers will again be required to take health examinations, City Health Inspector Ben Wiersema announced today. Wiersema said the project is part of a county wide program to order examinations for contagious and infectious diseases.

It is not a new program, but merely a resumption of a previous one, he said. The examinations were suspended, except in emergencies, during the war years because of the lack of facilities and help in laboratories, since most of the time was devoted to government work, he said.

Wiersema pointed out that those who need the examinations can get a "free start" this week by taking advantage of the chest X-ray now being offered to the public by the mobile unit at the Chamber of Commerce office. If the X-ray is not taken this week, food handlers might incur expense by having the exam taken elsewhere, where, the health inspector said.

Upon receipt of the examination results, the handlers will receive health cards if they have passed the tests successfully, he said. Employers will be held responsible to see that employees take the examinations, it was announced. They also will receive notices ordering them to have the employees take the exam, Wiersema said.

Blossoms Are Not Always Sign Tree Will Bear Fruit

Pollination Necessary; Artificial Means Being Tried by Orchardists

East Lansing—Blossoms on a fruit tree do not necessarily mean the tree will bear fruit, according to horticulturists at Michigan State college. Those blossoms must first be fertilized, and that requires careful planning on the part of the grower.

To set a good crop of fruit, pollen must be transferred from one blossom to another. Pollen is usually carried by bees and other flying insects, but if the weather is cool and windy, the bees will not fly. Therefore, a number of orchardists, in co-operation with Michigan State college, have been trying artificial pollination. They collect the pollen, ripen it, and apply it to the blossoms either by hand, duster, or even by airplane.

But the grower must be sure that the right pollen is available. Some varieties of fruit, which are called self-sterile, can be fertilized only with the pollen of a different variety. In general, this is true of apples, pears, sweet cherries, and plums. To overcome this difficulty, the grower may set up his orchard with varieties that will cross-pollinate each other. If this is not possible, he may graft individual branches on certain trees in the orchard, or he may set pails of blossoms throughout the orchard. It also helps if he provides strong colonies of bees to make the transfer of pollen.

A final consideration, say the horticulturists, is whether the varieties are compatible. For example, Cortland and early McIntosh apples do not work well together. Nor do Bartlett and Seckel pears. Time is another factor in compatibility, for the varieties chosen must have overlapping blooming periods if pollination is to occur.

HIGH ALTITUDES NEEDED

A llama can exist only in the highest altitudes—eight to 14,000 feet above sea level.

A new malting barley variety, developed cooperatively by the Wisconsin agricultural experiment station and the bureau of plant industry, was recently announced at the University of Wisconsin. It is called Moore, and is a six-rowed, white, smooth-bearded, spring-type variety with a fairly compact head.

USDA DESIGNS ATTRACTIVE HOUSE TO MEET NEEDS OF FARM WIFE

PLAN No. 7023-N

Here's a farm house for farm women designed to save steps, to cut down housework and to reduce traffic through the kitchen. It's pretty as a picture—and roomy, with accent on comfort.

Through a hallway from the back door you can reach any room in the house without going through another.

The kitchen is a handy U arrangement. It is large enough to provide ample room for a dining table and has plenty of built-in cabinet space. Menfolk coming in from chores can hang their wraps in the closet in the rear hallway and wash up in a lavatory nearby. If they've been out in the field they can shower and change clothes in the basement.

The bathroom is close to all three bedrooms. Cross ventilation in the two large bedrooms offers maximum comfort on hot days. And there is enough closet space to satisfy any woman.

A cheery fireplace lends a sense of comfort to the living room.

The full basement provides needed space for a workroom, food storage, for the shower room and the heating plant. It also offers a place for drying clothes.

This made-to-order plan was designed by architects of the U. S. Department of Agriculture after making on-the-farm studies.

Walls of hollow concrete block hold heat in during winter and keep it out during summer. They are strong and durable and offer low upkeep expense. Concrete floors add further to the fire-safety of the house.

Complete working drawings of this house are available through the county agricultural agent.

Farmers Told to Check Fields for Soil Erosion

Don Barden, chairman of the Allegan Soil Conservation district with headquarters at Fennville, and T. H. Lukins, chairman of the East Allegan District board with headquarters at Allegan, advised A. D. Morley, secretary of the two district boards, that now is an excellent time for farmers to check their fields to determine what erosion control practices should be put into effect this year.

When heavy rains occur at this time of year, heavy soil losses occur on soil that looks fairly level. Corn fields and other cultivated land with no cover crop to stop the water from running off during heavy rains, loose more top soil and have more gullies formed than do grassy slopes, hay fields, wheat fields and contoured farms, according to Barden and Lukins.

Turkey Brooder House Needs Spring Check Up

For a good start in raising healthy turkeys, Charles Reed, extension poultryman at Michigan State college, advises farmers to check the condition of the brooder house.

Any repairs needed should be made immediately. The floor, roof, and walls must be free from cracks and holes and broken window glass should be replaced. A good job of disinfection is important.

Poulters require fresh air, the specialist reports. Windows should be arranged so that they can be tilted slightly to allow fresh air to enter and circulate in the house. Lack of proper ventilation will result in damp litter and unhealthy poulters.

Brooders should be set up and operated for a day or two to insure that they are operating properly.

Care Needed in Installing Tile Drainage Systems

Installation of tile drainage systems in fields can be profitable, but the work must be properly done to be effective. This suggestion is made by F. W. Peikert, agricultural engineer at Michigan State college.

A tile system should be properly planned and staked out before the actual installation is made. Many tiling systems fail because the proper grades have not been used or because of inadequate tile size.

The specialist points out that it is important to avoid sags in the line due to clogging which may occur at such points. One clogged place can cause many hundreds of feet of tile to become ineffective. Where a tile line goes from a steeper to a flatter slope the velocity of the water will decrease and silt carried by the water may be dropped. A silt well placed at the change of grade will help to correct this condition.

A good grade of tile is essential, Peikert declares. Whether it is of clay or concrete, it should meet the strength specifications of the American Society of Testing Materials. Concrete tile requires soil tests. County agricultural agents can give information on these tests.

A source of many tile failures is at the outlet. Short pieces of tile at the outlet often become undermined and fall into the drainage ditch. Clogging can also occur when dirt falls from the bank and blocks the flow of water. A few feet of metal pipe at the outlet end of the tile line, projecting well beyond the edge of the ditch bank, will usually solve this problem.

New Committees Named at Meets

Seventy-five persons were elected for the extension program planning committees at meetings recently held at Allegan, Martin, Wayland, Hamilton and Ganges, with the Allegan county extension staff.

A. D. Morley, county agricultural agent, gave the outlook for the farm and home for the coming year and explained the need for conserving the soil. Mary E. Bullis, home extension agent, explained by the use of colored slides, work done in home economics and 4-H club work during the past year.

F. Earl Haas, county 4-H club agent, explained the committee organization and presented three questions for group discussion.

Several persons in this vicinity were named to committees which will meet during the next month to begin the planning of programs in agriculture, home economics and 4-H club work.

Northwest district committee members include: James Boyce, Marvin Klingenberg, Milton Timmerman, all of Holland; Ben Lohman and George Bauman, both of Hamilton; agricultural committee; Robert Immick, Kay Mulder, Mrs. James Boyce and Clarence Koopman, all of Holland; and B. Dora Beltman of Hamilton, 4-H club committee.

Mrs. George Lampen, Mrs. Ben Lohman and Mrs. James Koops, all of Hamilton; and Mrs. Herman Kortering and Mrs. Raymond Busscher of Holland, home economics committee.

Committees in the southwest district include agricultural committee, Harry Overhiser of South Haven, Bill Plummer, Herman Pederson and Leon Reimink, all of Fennville, and Lauren Osmun of Pullman; 4-H club, Mrs. Lowell Harry, Mrs. Herbert Radsek and Mrs. George Scott, all of South Haven, Don Hurley and Sanford Plummer, both of Fennville.

Home economics committee, Mrs. Herman Pederson, Mrs. Orville Compton and Mrs. Frank Foster, all of Fennville; Mrs. Virell Wilkinson of South Haven and Mrs. Norma Watts of Pullman.

Weed Chemical Damages Field Beans, Sugar Beets

East Lansing, (UP) Warnings to farmers against use of 2-4-D on sugar beets or field beans have been issued by Dr. B. H. Grigsby, Michigan State college weed control specialist.

The popular weed weed control chemical has been found to damage beets and field beans, Dr. Grigsby said. He suggested use of a saturated salt and water solution to keep weeds down on beets but college experts made no recommendations for control of weeds in bean fields.

Potatoes will tolerate small amounts of 2-4-D but it should be used only as a pre-emergence spray when the crop is planted, the college expert suggested.

Dr. Grigsby said tests also show dinitro phenol compounds can be used as selective weed killers for spring grains. Fields seeded to legume crops like clover and alfalfa should not be treated with 2-4-D, he said.

Toluol, a by product of the coke ovens, is a principal raw material for the manufacturing of TNT.

Summer Pasture for Swine Feeding Urged

When grain prices are high and the margin of profit in swine feeding is small, it is especially important to use pasture to the fullest extent, believes W. N. McMillen, animal husbandry specialist at Michigan State college.

All spring pigs should be put on pasture at once, the specialist points out. If a pasture program has not been planned, it is a good idea to fence off a corner of a field of alfalfa, clover, or alfalfa and brome grass mixture and turn in the pigs.

Blue grass and other permanent pastures can be used the next few weeks, but other pastures will be needed when permanent pastures dry up during the summer. Rape and oats can be sown so that they will be available for pasture within a few weeks. Sudar grass may also be sown a little later this spring.

Rural Zoning Urged By Specialist at MSC

Zoning of rural communities, small towns and townships is termed as "insurance" by Dr. Louis A. Wolfanger, extension specialist in land use planning at Michigan State college.

"Most communities," Dr. Wolfanger contends, "do not concern themselves with what is taking place in the limits until some misuse of land takes place or an offensive industry, business or other activity appears. Then they seek to remedy the condition by zoning or the enactment of a building code or some similar measure. But it is then too late because no such measure can be retroactive," the MSC extension specialist reports.

Through its extension and research facilities, Michigan State college has assisted many communities in zoning problems.

Home Planners Meet

"Guides for Home Planning" will be discussed and illustrated with slides by Olevia Meyer, specialist from Michigan State college, at 8 p.m., Tuesday, at the Griswold auditorium, in Allegan.

ELECTRICITY DANGER

Don't allow the cords of electric equipment to get wet when connections are damaged so that moisture gets to the wires. A short circuit may cause a fire before the fuse blows.

Rewards Offered To State 4-H'ers

Rural boys and girls in Michigan now have an exceptional opportunity to get special recognition for outstanding junior leadership records in 4-H club work. Both the highest ranking boy and girl will receive similar awards in the 1948 National 4-H Leadership program.

Awards comprise gold medals of honor for the two county winners, and gold wrist watches for the two state winners. The top ranking boy and girl in this extension section—who will be selected from state winners—each will receive a trip to the 1948 National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, provided by Edward Foss V'ison, Chicago meat packer. National awards remain the same as in previous years—$200 college scholarships and Moses silver trophies for the first place boy and girl, and $100 scholarships for the second place winners.

The program is conducted under the direction of the extension service.

LET BULBS COOL

Don't wash a light fixture without first turning off the switch and giving the bulb plenty of time to cool. Water on the hot glass can cause it to crack, and even explode.

IOWA SOIL VALUABLE

The soil of Iowa produces more wealth each year than all the gold mines in the world.

MSC Extension Service Planning Grass Days

A series of Grass Days for the state of Michigan have been planned for the month of June. Locations have been selected in 12 different sections of the state for the field days which will be sponsored by the Michigan State college extension service.

A Grass Day program was held last year in Mason county and attracted farmers from a wide area. This year's program will emphasize many of the successful features of that session. Information on planting, managing and harvesting the grass and legume crops will be stressed. Demonstrations of machinery and handling methods will emphasize ways of producing high quality hay.

A demonstration farm near Muskegon is also included among the 12 to be visited during the Grass Days. Special crops have been established on these farms for demonstration purposes. The visit to Muskegon will be on June 16.

Early Purchase of Insecticides Advised

Early purchase of insecticides needed this year is advised by county agricultural agent L. R. Arnold.

Reports from all parts of the nation say that farmers have been slow in determining their insecticide needs.

Economists say that although some declines have been noted, prices are fairly steady now.

For the nation as a whole, the supply of nicotine insecticides is better than last year. However the supply still continues below the demand and need. Enough pyrethrum is on hand. Rotenone insecticides are in good supply now but may run short during the latter part of the season.

Supplies of lead arsenate and calcium arsenate are probably sufficient to meet this year's needs. Good supplies are reported of the new insecticides such as DDT, chlordane, benzene hexachloride and chlorinated camphene, as well as the newer fumigants and fungicides.
